

MONSTERS

	THE MONSTER OF VICTOR FRANKENSTEIN	QUASIMODO	THE ELEPHANT MAN
REAL PERSON OR CHARACTER ?	Character	Character	Real person
WHO CREATED HIM?	Mary Shelley	Victor Hugo	—
WHEN ?	1st March 1818	1831	—
BOOK HE BELONGS TO	Frankenstein	The Hunchback of Notre-Dame	—
HIS PROBLEM	Victor's goal to generate life causes a great deal of pain through his ambition, selfishness, and hostility , both to himself and others. As a result, these acts caused him to become alienated from his friends and family, and turned him into the true monster in Frankenstein.	He was born deformed and ugly, and he was in love with a beautiful lady. But that lady was in love with a handsome man	various deformations that led to the marginalization of most of the towns people, a fact that made him feel very mila and quite alone.
COULD HE BE HAPPY?	Not really	Finally yes	He was happy with her mother, but when she dies, he became to fell sad again.
HOW DID HIS LIFE END?	He took his own life, because he felt bad about the things that he did	it's on the bottom of the page	On the morning of April 11, 1890, at the age of 27, Joseph Carey Merrick was found dead in his bed, he was suffocated

Thus before the gates of Notre Dame the scaffold for Esmeralda is fixed, where she perishes hanged before the eyes of Frollo, who admits to Quasimodo his joy at the death of the young woman. Shocked and furious by this fact, Quasimodo assassinates Frollo by pushing him from the tower of the cathedral.

As an epilogue, the hunchbacked Quasimodo goes to the open field where the corpses of the condemned lie and finds there the body of Esmeralda, which he embraces, remaining like that until he dies of hunger. Later, the Parisians open the tomb and find the skeletons. When they try to separate them, the hunchback's bones turn to dust.